Position Statement 4
Sexual & Reproductive Rights
We all have the right to express our sexuality, have relationships and make choices about our bodies, free from violence and discrimination.

Women and girls with disability have the right to make a family.

We all have the right to information about sexual and reproductive health.

No child or young person should be sterilised.

Sexual health education often excludes young women and girls with disability.

Forced sterilisation, forced abortion and forced contraception are forms of violence.

More than 70% of women with disability have experienced sexual violence.

Authorities take away the children of people with disability at a rate up to ten times higher than other parents.

Girls with disability are 3-4 times more likely to experience violence than their friends.

WHAT IT MEANS

VIOLENCE
To make a decision or choose to something after you have been provided with information and support to understand the consequences of making that choice.

DISCRIMINATION
Being treated unfairly or differently because of who you are, where you live, what you believe, or because you have a disability.

STERILISATION
A medical procedure that removes a person’s capacity to have children.

SEXUAL AND REPRODUCTIVE HEALTH
Means physical, mental and social wellbeing in all matters relating to your sexuality, your gender identity and the reproductive system. This includes having a safe sex life; having access to acceptable feminine hygiene products and contraception methods of your choice; being informed on how to protect against sexually transmitted diseases; and the freedom to decide if, when and how often you wish to have children.
HUMAN RIGHTS

Human rights are protected under international law. These rights are described in documents called conventions or treaties. Countries such as Australia can agree to be bound by these laws.

CONVENTION ON THE RIGHTS OF THE CHILD (CRC)

The CRC describes and protects the human rights of children and young people. Check out the “For Youth” page to learn more about your rights:
